CONTINUING EDUCATION CREDIT INFORMATION

Cardiovascular disease remains the leading cause of morbidity and mortality in the United States. New treatment strategies, medications and device developments in multiple areas of cardiovascular disease intend to afford benefit to the millions of patients who suffer from these conditions.

Given the rapid progress in cardiovascular medicine, it can be difficult for frontline providers to keep abreast of changes in preventive cardiology, pharmacotherapy, new innovative therapeutic procedures, diagnostic methods and new technologies. There are also many sources of information that people are learning from. It is important to provide a forum in which practicing healthcare providers are presented with new information in a way that establishes a common knowledge base.

This course aims to shorten the translation from evidence to practice on a wide variety of cardiovascular issues including preventive cardiology, diagnostic methods, new innovative therapies and procedures. This meeting will bring together diverse members of the interdisciplinary practice team, towards creating a common knowledge base so important to effectiveness of the care team in today's practice environment.

Learning Objectives

- Identify patients at risk for cardiovascular disease (CVD) and implement strategies to improve practice in cardiovascular prevention including risk factor modification lipid therapy
- Identify alternatives to antiplatelet and anticoagulants in coronary artery disease (CAD) and atrial fibrillation among patients who may benefit from these therapies
- Utilize new technologies such as handheld ultrasound devices to evaluate the presence of CVD
- Review the latest advances in heart failure treatment strategies
- Navigate the identification, evaluation and therapeutic options in peripheral artery disease (PAD)
- Implement the latest guideline updates in hypertension and syncope
- Counsel patients in advances in cardiovascular practice such as anticoagulants, lipid-lowering therapies and cardiovascular risk-lowering medications
- Recognize provider burnout and implement strategies to prevent it

Target Audience

This conference is intended for primary care physicians, family practice physicians, cardiologists, nurses, nurse practitioners, urgent care providers, physician assistants, and other members of the healthcare team interested in the care of patients with, and prevention of, cardiac problems.
