

Traci Schultz is a Nurse Professional Development Specialist at MedStar Georgetown University Hospital. She earned her BA from Virginia Military Institute in 2002, later transitioning to nursing by completing her BSN at Marymount University in 2015. Traci began her nursing career on a neurospecialty unit, where she developed a deep connection with the specialty population and her peers. She further advanced her education with a Master's in Clinical Nurse Leadership from James Madison University in 2022, discovering a passion for teaching, career advancement, and innovation. This led her to her current role as an NPD Specialist, where she focuses on improving nursing care and supporting nurse wellbeing through innovative approaches.